EUROMAR Travel Bursaries – Dublin 2012

The NMRDG was one of the founding members of the EUROMAR organisation, in association with AMPERE and the EENC. It seeks to award a number of student bursaries in 2012 to assist towards cost of attending the Dublin EUROMAR Magnetic Resonance meeting.

Guidelines for these awards are as follows:

- A limited number of fixed value bursaries will be made available in 2012, the total number and value being decided by the NMRDG committee.
- The application deadline is 1 April 2012, with applicants informed of decisions within two weeks of the deadline.
- Applications are open to current PhD students based in a UK University or research institute.
- Applicants are expected to present at the Dublin EUROMAR meeting (as either oral or poster) and their application for a bursary must be accompanied by an abstract outlining the proposed content of the presentation (maximum 1 A4 page).
- Applicants should declare the likely sources of their other funding toward attending EUROMAR and state how the bursary would facilitate their attendance. This should include a statement on how their project work is funded (a research council, industrial, etc).
- The research supervisor of each applicant is also asked to write (email) to confirm their student's intention to participate and present at EUROMAR.
- Both the student's application and the supporting supervisor statement must be sent to the current NMRDG secretary, preferably via email.

Payment

Bursaries will be paid to successful applicants on receipt of proof of travel, submitted either before or after the meeting. This should include submission of photocopies of tickets/travel documents (showing cost and travel dates), accompanied by a receipt as proof of payment.

In the event that the recipient is unable to attend the meeting the value of the bursary payment should be returned to the NMRDG.
